Richard and Karen Armstrong, owners of the Homelines program announced they currently have openings for young men 18 and older. Established in 2001 and located on their North Idaho ranch, Homelines offers structured family dynamics and vocational skills training in a variety of areas including: log cabin building to finish carpentry.

Homelines also offers a strong mentoring program in a traditional home setting with an emphasis on character building, which is enhanced by local community service projects.

College courses are available through the local extension campus and for those students needing high school completion; they may attend the local high school or acquire their GED certificate.

For more information contact Richard Armstrong at 888-267-7797 or visit the Homelines website: www.homelines.org
