The Optimum Performance Institute (OPI) just celebrated its fifth anniversary as the nation's premier transitional program for young adults ages 17-25. OPI is dedicated to providing them with a highly individualized therapeutic, educational and residential program.

OPI was founded by Dr. Robert F. Fischer, M.D., and Anne LaRiviere in Woodland Hills, CA. Their goal is to help young men and women discover the internal balance they need in order to make a seamless transition into adulthood.

OPI Participants attend college, finish high school, get a GED or find employment while receiving individual and group therapy, career and educational counseling.

Located near Los Angeles, OPI is particularly suited for those who enjoy apartment living in a metropolitan area. Participants develop their individual interests and passions while participating in everything from surfing to bouldering. They attend art exhibits and concerts and volunteer locally.
